

THE ROYAL MARINES
1923-1946

1923 saw the end of the 'Reds' and 'Blues' with the amalgamation of the RMA and RMLI to form the Corps of Royal Marines. In the twenties RM Battalions were formed for specific service in Ireland, Constantinople and Shanghai, but between the wars was really a period of consolidation and re-organisation for the Corps. When war was declared in 1939, it was only 12,000 strong but by 1944 it had risen to 78,500. The Second World War again gave full scope to the Corps to show its versatility, particularly in the Commando role. The first RM Commando (40) was raised early in 1942 and took part in the raid on Dieppe. By D-Day 1944, there were nine RM Commandos numbered from 40 to 48 inclusive and when the Army Commandos were disbanded in 1946, this role passed exclusively to the Corps.
